The law school complex consists of three buildings; Klein, Barrack and Shusterman halls, all conveniently located within one block on Temple University’s Main Campus.

KLEIN HALL
Built in 1973, the Charles Klein Law Building is the main law school building and is where law students spend most of their time. The recently renovated law library is located at the center of the building and offers a great light-filled atrium. Six mock trial practice rooms are furnished with judicial benches, jury boxes and video and audio equipment for use in the trial advocacy program. The Duane Morris, LLP Moot Court Room provides space for moot court competitions, lectures and meetings. Klein Hall also houses the dean’s office, the offices of all full-time faculty members and many other administrative offices. The first floor is home to a café where students can get a cup of coffee and a snack or sandwich before heading off to class. The café stays open in the evenings for the convenience of our evening students, who often come to class straight from work.

BARRACK HALL
Morris and Sylvia Barrack Hall opened its doors in spring 2002. Originally known as College Hall, this granite building was built in 1893 and served as the law school’s first home when it was founded in 1895. The three-story building is the home of a spacious and comfortable student lounge, student organization offices, and smart classrooms along with the career planning, registrar, student affairs and admissions and financial aid offices.

SHUSTERMAN HALL
Opened in 1997, Murray H. Shusterman Hall is a converted Gothic-style church. The building provides a conference center for law school symposia, meetings and other gatherings.

LAW LIBRARY
With more than 600,000 volumes, Temple’s law library is among the largest in the nation. The library spans the third to eighth floors of Klein Hall and includes seven levels of book stacks. Study carrels are on each level and there are two multilevel reading rooms. During the academic year, the library is open for day and evening hours seven days a week.

The library collection features a unique group of 17th, 18th and 19th century law books that constitutes the William Rawle Collection. Rawle was an early scholar of the Constitution and the founder of Rawle and Henderson, the oldest continual law firm in the nation. The Rawle Reading Room, a replica of a 19th century lawyer’s library, brings this valuable collection to students of legal history.

LAW SCHOOL BOOKSTORE
The law school bookstore, Barnes & Noble, is across the street from Klein Hall on the northwest corner of Broad Street and Cecil B. Moore Avenue. In addition to offering a wide variety of both legal and non-legal books and Temple Law merchandise, the bookstore contains a Starbucks coffee bar and sandwich shop. A quiet seating area provides students with a place to sit, chat and relax between classes.

---

DIRECTIONS TO TEMPLE’S MAIN CAMPUS
You can locate our Main Campus via MapQuest or Google Maps using the following address:
1719 N. Broad Street
Philadelphia, PA 19122
or visiting www.temple.edu/maps-and-directions

PARKING
If you’re interested in parking in a visitor lot, please use the Liacouras Garage, located at 1776 N. Broad Street. Parking costs $15 and is cash only.

TRAVELING BY PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION

Broad Street Subway: All local Broad Street subway trains stop at the Cecil B. Moore Station (Broad Street and Cecil B. Moore Avenue).

SEPTA Regional High Speed Lines: All lines stop at the Temple University Station, 10th and Berks Streets. For more information on public transportation routes stopping on campus, visit www.septa.org.